CAUTION ADVISED WHEN FILLING SILOS

Silo-filling can be a deadly business.

That's the warning from VPI specialists who explain that nitrogen dioxide, a poisonous gas that may form in fresh silage, can cause "silo-filler's disease," hazardous to humans and livestock. As little as 100 parts per million of the gas in the air can be dangerous.

Silo filler's disease causes severe coughing and burning or choking pains in the throat and chest. A person who has these symptoms while working in the silo, or afterward, should see a doctor immediately. Serious illness or death can result from delay. Farmers should take extra precautions when filling silos with corn grown in hot, dry years, or with silage made from corn that received heavy applications of nitrogen.

The specialists recommend these precautions:

Run the blower for 10 minutes before going into a partly-filled silo and keep it running while inside.

Be alert to irritating odors. The gas tends to settle in the silo chute and base.

Look for yellowish - brown fumes. Use a flashlight if the silo is dark.

Keep children and animals away from a silo during filling, and for at least a week after filling.

RATES LOWERED FOR "THE FOUNDERS"

Williamsburg, Va.- The Jamestown Corporation, producers of the two popular outdoor dramas, "The Common Glory" and "The Founders" has announced a change in rates for their afternoon drama, "The Founders."

Designed to benefit families and school groups, the rate change lowers ticket prices to one dollar for all members of a party which includes at least one child, provided one adult member of that group purchases a reserved seat ticket at full price. Reserved seat tickets are $3.00 and $2.50. Th rate cut goes into effect immediately.

"The Founders" is the story of the settling of Jamestown, the first successful English settlement in the New World. Performances are at 3:45 P. M. every day except Monday in a cool shady amptitheatre on the shore of Lake Motoaka.

Red Cross Seeks Funds

The Appomattox County Red Cross Chapter's Campaign for membership and funds carried on during the month of March had a goal of $2,226. $953.08 was raised, which was $1,272.92 short of the goal. In order that the Red Cross local programs of swimming classes, home service, and perhaps, the most important, the blood program, can be continued, it is necessary that the needed funds be raised.

The night of Friday, August 8, has been designated for a concentrated solicitation of the town of Appomattox for membership and funds for the Red Cross. Mrs. Morton Ferguson, Mr. Newton Jennings and Mr. James "Jimmy" Redding are requesting that all those who are willing to help to keep the important local Red Cross programs, by helping in the fund drive, to please contact at least one of them.

MILKING MACHINE EFFICIENCY CAN BE IMPROVED

What can Virginia dairymen do to solve the problem of slow-milking dairy cows?

William S. Griffith, assistant dairy specialist at VPI, says obstinate bovines slow down the milking process at many farms, and many gimmicks have been tried to see if they could be made to milk out faster.

Some dairy specialists have theorized that milking time might be shortened by increasing vacuum or pulsation rate. At Cornell University, 18 slow-milking dows were milked at three different vacuum levels (10, 12.5, and 15) and three different pulsation rates (20, 50, and 60). Increasing the vacuum level did increase the rate of milking, and more increase took place with a change from 10 to 12.5 than from 12.5 to 15. Increasing the pulsation rate increased the speed of milking but it had much less effect than increasing the vacuum.

Different cows reacted in different ways to the changes. Generally, increasing vacuum level or pulsation rate affected slow-milking cows more than it did fast-milking cows.

These investigators used a Sherling-type DeLaval Milker suspended from a spring-type scale. A small weight-controlled vacuum pump supplied the vacuum. The three vacuum levels were obtained by changing the weights in the vacuum pump. The three pulsation rates were obtained by setting the adjustable Sterling-type pulsator before each milking. The standard vacuum level is 12.5 inches of vacuum and the pulsation rate is 48 per minute when operated according to the manufacturer's recommendations.

Griffith says it is impotrant to note that no noticeable effect occurred when the pulsation rate was increased from 50 to 80. Therefore Virginia dairymen should follow the directions of the company which made the machines they are using. No beneficial effect should be expected when pulsators are advanced beyond the manufacturer's directions.

The amount of strippings was greater at 15 inches than at any other vacuum level in the Cornell tests. Striping time decreased when the vacuum level was raised from 10 to 12.5. However, no decrease was noted when the vacuum level was increased from 12.5 to 15. Griffith says dairymen will likely obtain the best results by operating milking machines according to the manufacturer's directions.

ALFALFA IMPORTANT IN FORAGE PROGRAM

Alfalfa's role is increasingly important on Virginia farms — despite weevil woes. And, say VPI agronomists, it's apt to stay important in any forage program for a long time to come.

The first good August rains will be the signal for many farmers to start seeding alfalfa, but there are some things to do now, the agronomists say.

The soil should already have been selected and tested. Now is the time (30 to 60 days before seeding) that the area and should be prepared. The ideal seedbed is firm and compact so that it provides plenty of moisture. Lack of a good seedbed is one of the most common causes of alfalfa failure. There should be enough fine granular soil to cover the seeds. Disk frequently to destroy weeds.

Use a variety adapted to Virginia. Certified Williamsburg, Certified Atlantic, Certified Buffalo, certified Narragansett, Kansas Common, and Oklahoma Approved are recommended. The first four listed have consistently yielded the highest. Williamsburg has been top yielder in more tests than any other variety, and is especially well adapted in eastern and Piedmont Virginia. Narragansett is the most winter hardy and should be used on elevations over 2,500 feet and on exposed locations. Atlantic is fairly winter hardy. Buffalo should be used where bacterial wilt is a problem.

Jamestown Exhibit

Jamestown, Va.- According to a new medical exhibit now open at the Old World Pavilion, Jamestown Festival Park, the first sanitation law in Virginia established in 1610 was exceptionally severe on men.

The law stated, in part, "Every man shall have . . . special and due care, to keepe his house sweet and clean, and as much of the street that lays before his door . . . and he shall set his bedstead whereon he sleeps three foot at least from the ground . . . . or he will answer for the contrary at a martial court.'

The exhibit, which includes an early Virginia hospital and 17th century surgical instruments and medical books, shows vividly how ill-prepared early settlers were able to cope with health problems. The hospital model is a replica of one built near the James River Rapids (now the lower part of Richmond.)

Three of the instruments used by colony physicians during the 1600's for amputation of limbs are displayed. One visiting modern - day surgeon upon seeing the scythe-shape amputating knife remarked he rather suspected "it could be better used for the removal of colonial tonsils."

Among the medical treatises displayed in the Festival Park pavilion is a rare first edition of the French to Dutch translations of "Chirurgie" by Ambroise Pare (1510-1590). Also, John Woodall's "The Surgeon's Mate" (1655). Woodall was the foremost 17th-century English surgeon, and one of the subscribers to the London Company which promoted colonizations, such as Jamestown in the new world.

All items in the new exhibit were loaned to Jamestown Festival Park by the history section of the Richmond Academy of Medicine.

Although the celebration of Jamestown's 350th birthday was held in 1957, the permanent 30-acre Festival Park and all exhibits, sponsored by the Commonwealth of Virginia, are open daily from 9:00 A. M. to 5:00 P. M.

Americans Cautioned

The State Department has advised Americans not to travel to the Middle East, particularly to Lebanon and Iraq.

In a brief announcement, the Department said it had instructed the Passport Office and overseas posts to "alert American tourists and others who may be traveling in or through the Middle East of the situation there and to advise them against such travel, particularly to Lebanon and Iraq, unless imperative."

NEW BOOK IN THE COUNTY LIBRARY

Mister Music Maker
Lawrence Welk
By Mary Lewis Coakley.

"A-one and a-two and....." are some of the best known words in America — made famous by the orchestra leader Lawrence Welk on his twice-a-week TV shows. What is the secret of his immense success? How did he rise from poverty and obscurity on a North Dakota farm to become the top star he is today? What kind of family life does he have? Why do so many people like his music? The answers to all such questions about Lawrence Welk are in this book, the biography of the man who has a $3,900,000 a year income but who remains unpretentious, devoutly religious, and wholehearted-ly concerned with giving his audiences the kind of musical entertainment they want.

Also: a new book by Charles Coffin, on Point Count Bidding in Contract Bridge.

Death of a Nation
by Clifford Dowdey.

Confederate forces invaded the United States of America in the waning days of June, 1863. On the first three days of July a momentous battle was fought at Gettysburg, Pa. For three days two great armies, the Confederates under Robert E. Lee, the Union troops under George Meade, were locked in violent combat. This is the story of the Confederate role in the battle. It is a narrative of great detail and power and a searching examination of the reasons for the ultimate defeat of the Army of Northern Virginia.

GOOD POSTURE

Good posture has as much to do with having a good figure as the correct weight. No matter how pleasingly shaped a person is, if their shoulders droop, their stomach will protrude and the bust will seem to be flabby One should practice good posture at all times.

Fat, flabby arms are the bane of plump women on the far side of forty. Muscles become flabby from insufficient use, and fat gives a lumpy appearance to the skin. After reducing, this is especially noticeable. If you were very fat the flesh of the arms tends to sag as the fat disappears, unless the weight loss is properly regulated and accompanied by suitable exercises.

Suitable exercises for arm should be a part of your daily schedule, as you need to strengthen flabby arm muscles or develop thin arms. You will want to start slowly and work up to about five minutes of exercise each day.

The backstroke, as used in swimming, is a good exercise for the arms. It is also of great value in developing the large muscles which lie under the breasts. You may do it in your room by standing before a mirror: Start with both arms by your sides, then lift the right arm slowly up as high as possible. Then swing it downward to the side again. Repeat the same movement with the other arm. Put some effort into it, as if you were really plowing your way through the surf. You will see that the breast is lifted every time the arm goes up and back. You will feel the pull at the upper part of your arms.

Another good exercise for upper arms and the bust is to stand with your hands to your sides, then raise the arms overhead, clapping the palms together. Now, throw them from this overhead position straight out to the sides, on a level with the shoulders, palms upwards. Then bend your elbows and touch your shoulders with your finger, then arms back to sides.

An exercise designed to help correct drooping shoulders is very simple. Stretch the arms out to the sides on a level with the shoulders, fists clenched. Now swing the arms and shoulders together in a rotating movement upward and backward, lifting the shoulders as the arms go up and back.

TIME FLIES

Dayton, Ohio.- The newly elected secretary of the Third Street Baptist Church's Sunshine Circle for Young People was told one of her duties would be to record the minutes of each meeting.

Her second day on the job, she was called upon to read the minutes.

"Minutes of the last meeting," she said, "twenty minutes, six seconds."

Then she sat down.

KNOW THE WEATHER

By E. H. Sims

Can those suffering from arthritis "feel" the approach of rain?

Quite often the rising humidity that accompanies rain will telegraph the coming of precipitation to the arthritic.

However, this is not an infallible rule. Often the moisture content of the air will rise and rain will not necessarily follow. The arthritic's joints may then ache and give a false forecast of rain.

So the person suffering from arthritis is not a foolproof forecaster of rain. Sometimes he is a foolproof hygometer, for damp air definitely affects the comfort of many suffering from arthritis.
